drink to my love, in a guidad of wind;

For she is more bright then the smiler light

Oluwing like wine! Internalised wine

Then tryst where honey been any vellow wine

From bright-painted cups, filled brimming

Like her, whom I love, is this wondrous wine

But not all the wine on the moon-lig hied earth

And murmur my toast to beautiful you?

In rose tinted wine! Inscious ripe wine!

Or leveliest charms that ever had birth

Entrances my soul like this lady mine!

She is warmer than wine! dearer than wine

None other compares with this sweetheart mine.

BY CLIO STANLEY.

Twilight was rapidly falling over the meadows and houses at Bycroft, when Vane Darrell rode rapidly through the town, and drew rein at the small brown cottage at the end

He shivered more than oace as he passed under their shadowy branches. Either be was haunted by some terrible memory, or by some evil thought that moved him strange-about him one moment to be sure of the long avenue of elm trees.

In tropical light or magical sunshine,

More rich is the hus of this lady mine!
